The Share Centre throws lifeline to 6,000 former Edward Jones customers

Retail stockbroker, The Share Centre is offering its services to 6,000 former Edward Jones customers, following the news that Towry (which acquired the company in 2009) is closing the accounts of any former Edward Jones clients with less than £5,000 in assets on December 10.

The Share Centre can offer investment advice at no extra cost to all affected Towry customers opening an account and will pay up to £300 towards the cost of any transfer charges made by Towry. The Share Centre hopes that this assistance, in addition to the wide variety of tools and advice on offer through www.share.com will provide all the reassurance needed for affected Towry clients that their investments are welcome somewhere.

Guy Knight, Director at The Share Centre, said: ‘It is vital that all investors can receive affordable, professional advice that sets them in the right direction and offers periodic reviews. Both are critical to investors, no matter the size of their investable assets, and we aim to provide high quality advice and guidance as standard to all.

“We look forward to hearing from any Towry clients who want help in structuring their investments for the long term.”
